Signature CIO Growth Fund Open Ended IC PLC

MASTER FUND COMMENTARY

As of 28 February 2025

Fund Performance

The Signature CIO Growth Fund posted negative performance in February, primarily due to diminishing US consumer confidence amidst rising policy uncertainty.

Our overweight position in equities negatively impacted performance this month, as global equities lagged behind cash, bonds and gold. Specifically, our overweight position in US equities was a detractor, as the market experienced a midweek sell-off following the reaffirmation of Trump's 25% tariffs on Canada and Mexico, along with the announcement of an additional 10% tariff on China. The tech sector sell-off intensified, with Nvidia's performance dragging down AI stocks. Concurrently, the US 10-year yield declined, reflecting market expectations of potential Federal Reserve rate cuts driven by trade fears.

Gold also saw a retreat from its high towards end of the month, due to rising USD strength and profit-taking activities by investors.

Europe ex-UK equities outperformed US equities in February despite ongoing tariff pressures and the potential for a ceasefire in Ukraine being considered. However, our underweight position in Europe ex-UK equity further contributed to the fund's underperformance.

On a positive note, our underweight position in emerging market local currency bonds added value, as the USD surged against most Emerging Market currencies in response to Trump's tariff threats. Additionally, our opportunistic trade in US tech stocks yielded positive results, as we capitalized on profits ahead of Nvidia's earnings announcement.

Fund Positioning

We remain pro-risk in our asset allocation, with a preference for US equities and High Yield bonds.

We have fully exited iShares US S&P 500 Tech ETF as we decided to take profit on our Tech opportunistic trade following the recovery since January trough, while uncertainties around NVIDIA earnings remain high. While we maintain a positive outlook on US software, we acknowledge potentially greater volatility with semiconductors. We have reallocated the proceeds back into the broad US equity ETF. The US remains our most preferred equity market, underpinned by the healthy US economy and robust earnings growth and we believe that the recent market volatility provides for an opportunity to buy on dips.

We trimmed our exposure to Developed Market High Yield (DM HY) bonds to initiate a new position in Global Convertible Bonds (CB). Historically, convertible bonds have outperformed DM HY bonds in the latter stages of the rate cutting cycle. Convertible bonds also offer higher credit quality and lower default rates, providing better downside protection in the event of spread widening. Additionally, they present higher upside capture potential, particularly with anticipated recoveries in sectors such as Technology, where it has significant room for growth relative to the broader US index. However, a key risk to this strategy is the possibility of a much slower growth than anticipated.
